To whom it may concern,

Although I am a new Science teacher at AEA this year, I like the topics developed around financial literacy using the Sustainable Development Goals. I would like to take this opportunity to highly recommend the Give Nation Compassion Class Curriculum to use with all students from ages 5-18 years old in any type of school, public or private.

It is evident by the student's participation in these lessons, teaching financial literacy using the topics from the Sustainable Development Goals are key to helping students expand their learning about these issues in our world today.

Teaching and modeling kindness and compassion help contribute to create an atmosphere where students can feel at ease to demonstrate skills they are learning about and actively participate in reading and writing literacy, vocabulary games with both the whole class and in small groups, participate in open discussions, singing of songs for younger students and create great science projects which contribute very well to fostering knowledge in all grade levels of students. Additionally, the use of the Give Nation App helps students feel successful in beginning to learn about charity and how they can impact the world by giving to others.

Sincerely,
